

OPEC will discuss ways to defend its prices

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Oil prices are falling, and OPEC is digging in to defend its official prices. Most Americans, whether they count pennies at the gas pump or percentage points in the GNP, will have good reasons to root against the oil cartel.
"On balance, the economists say the world's better off with a lower price," said Dillard Spriggs, president of Petroleum Services Ltd., a New York consulting firm.
A drop in oil prices can be like an unexpected tax refund, giving more money to consumers and businesses alike. Every $1 drop in prices saves $6 billion for customers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.
What's more, unlike a tax refund, a drop in oil prices can give the economy a shot in the arm without stimulating inflation.
Generally, lower oil prices are helpful to the world economy. "Energy Secretary Donald Hodel said Thursday in London. For the U.S., estimates are that every $5 decline in oil prices results in approximately a 1 percent increase in gross national product."

Stephen Smith, a senior vice president and oil industry analyst at Data Resources Inc., a private research firm in Lexington, Mass., estimated that a cut of $1.20 in OPEC's benchmark price of $29 a barrel could lower U.S. prices for gasoline and fuel oil by 8 cents a gallon.
OPEC, under pressure because of price cuts of as much as $1.50 a barrel announced this week by Norway and Britain, announced Thursday that oil ministers would meet in Switzerland on Oct. 22 to discuss ways to defend their prices.
Similar discounting by Britain and Nigeria last year led OPEC to lower the price of its reference grade crude oil to $29 a barrel from $34 in March 1983 and to set a production ceiling of 17.5 million barrels daily.
The benefits from the slide in oil prices that began in early 1983 have not been as pronounced for many European and developing countries, however.
In the United States, the price of oil, after adjusting for inflation, has dropped to 1979 levels. But because oil is sold for dollars and the dollar has been on a record-breaking rise, prices have climbed in some countries at a much slower than over the preceding decade.

"Given the general improvement in the world economy, right now a decline (in oil prices) would be very beneficial," said Richard Kessler, oil Georgetown University Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington. He said the drop in prices would keep economic expansion moving and give a new lift to debt-ridden Third World oil importers.
But there can be harmful fallout from a drop in oil prices as well—bankruptcies for drilling companies, declines in orders for steel pipe and troubles for banks that have loans from energy-related companies.
And for countries counting on oil to prop up sagging economies, such as Nigeria and Mexico, a tumble in the price of oil is a threat to stability. That's also a threat to the stability of Western banks which have made loans to those countries.

Snow raises havoc in Salt Lake City

By STEVEN J. HANSEN
Universe Staff Writer

The heaviest recorded snowfall for Salt Lake City blasted the valley Thursday, raising havoc with motorists, closing schools and felling branches on powerlines that left thousands in the dark.
Beginning Wednesday night, the storm dropped 15.4 inches of snow on the Salt Lake Valley floor. William Alder, National Weather Service's meteorologist, said it was a one-in-50-year storm.
Thursday's storm barreled through the valley overburdening trees that have not shed their leaves and causing branches to fall and snap power lines, said John Serfustini, spokesman for Utah Power & Light Co.
Between 15,000 and 20,000 customers were out of power due to the storm, Serfustini said. The worst damage occurred on Salt Lake City's eastern bench. "We have 500 crewmen working around the clock. Some have been working for 36 hours straight," he said.
UP&L has brought crews from Ogden, American Fork and as far as Rexburg, Idaho. In some instances, power will not be restored for two or three days, he said.
Along with damaged power lines, the Utah Highway Patrol reported an accident on I-15 in Davis County, which involved up to 50 vehicles and left 20 people injured. Up to 25 accidents were reported in the Salt Lake area.
The storm set a record as the heaviest snowfall in a 24-hour period for Salt Lake City. The former record was 18.1 inches, which fell on Dec. 27-28, 1972. The records have been kept since 1928.
More than 40 inches of snow were recorded at Alta Ski Resort after a storm hit the Wasatch Mountains. Despite the heavy snowfall, the ski resort will keep its lifts stationary until a week be-

The autumn snow over the BYU campus coated the state just south of the Smith Family Living Center. Provo's snowfall was measured compared with the 18.4-inch dumping Salt Lake City received Thursday.

Employee charged with arson after hotel fire kills 13, injures 60

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — A fire that authorities believe was started by a disgruntled employee swept through an eight-story residence hotel early Thursday, killing 13 people and injuring 60, some of whom jumped from windows.
A part-time employee who Mayor Frank X. Graves Jr. said had argued with the night manager of the 80-year-old Hotel Alexander Hamilton was arrested and charged with aggravated arson and one count of murder.
Russell William Conklin, 44, was being held without bail at the Passaic County Jail following an arraignment. He entered no plea before Municipal Judge Ronald Fava.
Graves and fire officials confirmed the blaze killed 13 people, most of them elderly. Hospital officials said 60 people had been injured.

"People were screaming, trying to tie the sheets and blankets together to get out the windows," — Lusyvia Rivera Hotel occupant
The blaze broke out about 12:15 a.m. in the 150-room downtown hotel occupied by about 300 permanent residents and transients, many of them clients of "various agencies of government," Graves said. The fire was under control at 3:40 a.m.
Some residents jumped from windows, some climbed to safety on fire-fighters' ladders and others were rescued from the roof, authorities said. The injuries included smoke inhalation, broken bones and burns.
"People were screaming, trying to tie the sheets and blankets together to get out the windows," said Lusyvia Rivera, 33, who fled with her three children from a first floor room. "The ones who were more scared just went ahead and jumped."
Flames were shooting from fourth-floor windows when firefighters arrived at the scene, and smoke billowed from the building hours later. The fire spread from the third floor through air shafts and engulfed four or five floors, said Fire Chief William Comer.
The fire spread so fast and the flames were so intense in combination with toxic smoke from paint and plastics, and it could be that some residents (residents) were so old they couldn't get out," Comer said.

Reagan snubbed from media

JPI bureau chief says style keeps him above scandals

By DANIEL BILLIN
Universe staff writer

A senior White House correspondent passed a picture of an "encompassed" President Reagan whose administration and campaign organization shelters him from the media in a "cocoon."
Helen Thomas, White House Bureau Chief for United Press International, told the audience at Thursday's Political Awareness Month lecture that Reagan's administration aggressively manages the news media and carefully controls the information they are given.
Thomas has covered each presidential administration since John F. Kennedy took office in 1961. Thomas took time off from her travels with the Reagan re-election campaign to speak at BYU.
"It is a marvel to watch the masterful way in which the Reagan machine operates," she said.
Thomas said while every president she has covered has attempted to manage the news, Reagan and his advisers have it down to a "fine art."
The last news conference held by Thomas was July 24, making a total of only five so far this year, Thomas said. Besides holding few press conferences, Reagan has not outlined in his campaign any specific plans for the next four years, she said, adding, "Reagan is long on broad statements and short on specifics."
Thomas was critical of Reagan's news conference policy, saying the conferences are the only forum in which presidents accept formal questions. As an institution, news conferences are vital to democracy, she said.
Thomas contrasted what she called Reagan's "trust me" approach to democratic presidential candidacies. Walter Mondale's announced proposals to reduce the federal deficit. Even though Mondale's plan is unpopular, the public is "only asking the minimum" in wanting to know candidates' plans for the future, she said.
Thomas said the most important question Reagan needs to answer is how that will do for the next four years if re-elected.
"We need to know where our leaders are taking us," Thomas said, adding that outlining specific goals and plans allows the public to vote intelligently.
Thomas said the Reagan administration's only question when giving information to the media is, "Will it make the evening news?" When he doesn't want to confront the press, Reagan has reporters a "wide berth," she said.
Reporters often must resort to shouting questions at Reagan as he walks to his helicopter. "His aides make sure the motors are loud enough that they drown out the questions," she joked.
His detachment allows Reagan to avoid tough questions and remain distant from troublesome issues. His image has hardly been tarnished even though 40 of his top appointees have resigned "under a cloud" or been fired, she said.
Both vice presidential candidates also have had their differences with the press, she said. Geraldine Ferraro has described reporters as more accessible.

Universe: A recent article in the Wall Street Journal said disunion of foreign policy has been reduced to "three questions shouted over the top of a car." Do you find that discouraging?
Thomas: If that's what we have to do, we do it. It's discouraging in that we don't have more access to the president, because I think he should be more accountable. He's making policy in a world where we need to know things in a hurry. In that aspect, I think he's been running his campaign without anyone asking any real questions.
Universe: How does that type of attitude affect the country?
Thomas: It's working for them in terms of the picture they want to present, but I think it's detrimental to the country. It doesn't give the country a fair shot at knowing what they should know when they go to the polls. What is he going to do in the future? How is he going to handle the economic problem? So he's only attacked his opposition without saying what he would do, and nobody's been able to pin him down.
Universe: If Mondale is elected, will the nature of your job change?

Thomas: My job doesn't change — I try to get information from presidents. The thesis remains the same. I think he would be more accessible. At least in the beginning they all are a little bit more accessible and more informative while the honeymoon is on. Every president has a honeymoon when they are a little more open, more enthusiastic and so forth, but the curtain comes down on all of them. It comes in the relationship with the press at some point. Reagan had a longer honeymoon than most presidents because of the attempt on his life.
Universe: Recently two former members of presidential administrations spoke on campus — James Watt and Jody Powell. Both were critical of the press. Did Watergate instill presidential administrations with a general bias against the press?
Thomas: Well, I'm sure there is a wariness. It's the first place, if you go into journalism, don't expect to be loved. We're not trying to win a beauty contest or popularity contest. We're trying to get the truth to the people so they can make their own decisions.

Republican candidate for lieutenant governor Val Owens speaks to an audience assembled at Provo High School Thursday night, while Democratic gubernatorial candidate Wayne Owens waits for his opportunity to address the group. American party candidate L.S. Brown also spoke.

Candidates address issues at Provo High

By LAURA CHILDERS
Senior Reporter

Wayne Owens, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, discussed education, political balance and economic development with a group of residents Thursday at Provo High School. "Meet the Candidate Night," a Republican gubernatorial candidate Norman Bangert was scheduled to speak at the meeting but did not appear, so his running mate, Val Owens, candidate for lieutenant governor, spoke in his place.
Also attending the meeting was the American Party candidate for governor, L.S. Brown.
Improvement in Utah's educational system was an issue on the minds of all the candidates but their solutions varied. "Education has always been, is currently and will always be a top priority of the people of Utah," Owens said.
The Republican candidate said he would increase the productivity of Utah's schools by spending less on new buildings and encouraging capable districts to go to a year-round school system, he said.
The American Party candidate said the responsibility for improving the educational system lies with parents. Brown suggested students should have reached the second or third grade level by the time they enter their first year of formal schooling. Education should be streamlined so students can complete the elementary and high school period within nine years rather than 12.

The focus of Brown's comments was taxes, however. "Government is so interested in becoming bigger and bigger that they forget the people in the street," he said. "It's becoming impossible to pay taxes."
Taking into consideration his predominantly Republican audience, Owens said it is possible to be a Democrat and still "march to the beat of your own drummer."
"I've never supported abortion and I've never supported gun control," he said.
Political balance is one of the most important issues of the gubernatorial race, he said. Republican domination of the state legislature creates the need for a Democratic governor to ensure the proper function of checks and balances.

Editor's note: The following are excerpts from a Daily Universe interview with Helen Thomas, White House Bureau Chief for United Press International.
Universe: How does the Reagan administration differ from the others you've covered in the way they handle the news media?
Thomas: You have the right word — they handle it. I think we've managed more now than by any other administration. They've got it down to a fine art, they call the shots, they set the agenda. Once in a while they'll let you get away from more or less, they control us totally in our access to the president.
We have not had a news conference since July 24. There's been a lot of water under the dam since then, both nationally and internationally, and all we can do is shout a question at the president. There have been five news conferences this year; that is far less than news conferences in recent times. They say that's on a par with Carter, but I think Carter

Aid offered to displaced workers

By STEVEN J. HANSEN

For some displaced Geneva workers, hunting season is always open. But these laid-off employees want to track down jobs, not deer.

To facilitate the hunt, Geneva Steel has initiated a program to arm job hunters with the skills and incentive to find employment. The Job Search Assistance Center at Geneva is designed to service displaced workers in their pursuit of employment.

The program begins with a two-day workshop conducted by a consulting firm that teaches people how to find jobs. "The workshops help develop skills that are needed to find employment like self-assessment, search methods, resume preparation and interviewing skills," said Mel Arrington, coordinator of the center's activities.

The Orem facility is one of a number of similar centers nationwide for employees affected by layoffs, said Dixie Barsdale, economic development specialist with Mountainland Association of Governments.

The center not only provides job search assistance, but also job aptitude testing, simulated interviews which are videotaped and then criti-qued, and certification for school, said Rick Armstrong, career guidance counselor.

The training center invited more than 1,300 former Geneva employees to participate in the program. So far, only 160 have taken advantage of the facilities, said Armstrong.

Armstrong said a group of 10 to 15 laid-off workers use the center regularly. He attributed the low response to his findings that people are self-sufficient. Either former employees have already found jobs on their own or some have relocated, Armstrong said.

Besides those who are involved in the Geneva program, 200 to 250 other former employees have transformed into students under the Training Readjustment Assistance program. The federally sponsored program provides educational opportunities for the unemployed to learn a marketable skill, said Skip Standiford, employment counselor.

Standiford said many of the skills acquired at Geneva are not transferable in the open job market. "They have learned a specific trade that is not marketable elsewhere. Even a bricklayer or an electrician's skill at Geneva is not the same in the open market," he said.

2nd debate will have 4 questioners

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newspersons Georgie Anne Geyer, Marvin Kalb, Morton Kondracke and Henry Trewitt were chosen Thursday to be the panel of questioners at Sunday's presidential debate in Kansas City, Mo.

The League of Women Voters said neither President Reagan nor his Democratic challenger, Walter F. Mondale, had veto power in selecting the panel for their second debate. There was extensive criticism before the debate on Oct. 7 because the Reagan-Mondale camps had rejected nearly 100 journalists whose names had been submitted for the panel.

Nutrition helps in preventing cancer

By KATRINA BOYLE
Universe Staff Writer

Nutrition can play a role in the prevention of cancer, speakers told students during the Symposium on Nutrition and Cancer Wednesday afternoon.

Elder L. Tom Perry, a member of the Council of Twelve of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, began the symposium with a spiritually-oriented keynote address.

"Physical well-being is an important ingredient in our growth here in mortality," he said. The scriptures contain repeated references about nutrition, he said.

He continued with Biblical references on nutrition and the background and aspects of the Word of Wisdom, which is found in Section 89 of the Doctrine and Covenants. Much attention is being given to the health program of the LDS Church, Elder Perry said.

"I've learned to have a greater appreciation for medical technology," he said. Within his own family, he explained, he has come to understand the devastating effects cancer can have on a family. He encouraged, teaching and developing the cures that come from research.

"Be the greatest leaders in research and development in conquering these problems that beset mankind," Elder Perry said.

The next speaker continued to explore the connection between religion and nutrition.

Dr. Norman L. Smith, a Salt Lake specialist of internal medicine, said people experience a "leap of faith" when they attach religious faith to unorthodox health practices.

"Remember, nutrition is a science, not a religion," Smith said during a post-symposium panel discussion.

Smith said scriptures must be looked at in context. "Remember the word 'wholesome,'" he said, in reference to the mention of herbs in the Word of Wisdom.

"There are dangerous herbs out there," he said. "It's not a matter of taking herbs, it's a matter of which ones to take."

According to Smith, quackery is the incautious enthusiasm in promotion of an unproven or disproven method. The "try it and see" advice is one of the first signs of quackery. This is dangerous because the effects can be harmful.

A person taking herbs is not avoiding drugs, Smith said, because one herb contains three or four drugs. Most medicines prescribed by physicians are derived from plants.

A review of the American Cancer Society's Guidelines relating to cancer prevention and nutrition was presented by one of its board members.

Dr. Randall Burt of the University of Utah School of Medicine said, "I think that following the guidelines (of the ACS) will help a person be healthy."

18,000 tons of salt needed to combat year's falling snow

By BRENT A. BLANCHARD
Universe Staff Writer

Doctors may advise patients to avoid salt for their arteries' sake, but the traffic arteries in Utah County could receive more than 18,000 tons of the savory substance this winter.

Road salt improves driving safety by melting snow and ice, but the price involved includes damage to bridges and rust on unprotected car bodies.

Salt dissolves in ice and melts it because salt solutions freeze at lower temperatures than water.

District 6 of the Utah State Highways Department has stockpiled or ordered 17,000 tons of salt, according to Maintenance Engineer Myron Taylor.

Another engineer said that is the same amount used by the highway district to remove ice from highways last year.

Provo Street Manager Reuben Jones said 1,000 tons of salt has been stockpiled for the winter season. According to Jones, workers began preparing salt-spreading equipment more than a month ago.

Bobby Biggs, manager of the Orem Street Maintenance Division, said the city of Orem has 30 tons of salt right now, plus 60 more tons he expects to be delivered within a week. He said the 30 tons on hand is enough for two major storms.

Orem will order more salt as the season progresses, Biggs said. He added that the 90 tons he mentioned did not represent the total winter stockpile.

Jones said all the salt can result in damage to the concrete of bridges. Jones is responsible for maintaining several Provo bridges over Interstate 15 and the Provo River.

Dr. Don Budge, a BYU civil engineering professor, said salt does not chemically attack concrete, but damages structures by causing corrosion of steel reinforcements. Water carries salt to embedded steel parts through microscopic capillaries.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Operators in a downtown office are ready to start taking calls Friday on a nationwide, toll-free hot line for people with information on some of the 500,000 to 2 million American children who are reported missing every year.

Cougars face offensive battle

By SCOTT D. PIERCE
Sports Editor

It will be the nation's top passing offense versus the nation's top rushing offense Saturday in Colorado Springs, Colo., when No. 5 BYU takes on the Air Force Academy.

The Cougars are averaging 349.8 yards per game through the air, 47.1 yards ahead of second-place Boston College. The Falcons have gained 388.7 yards per game on the ground, 8.7 yards in front of Texas Christian. BYU is third in total offense, while Air Force shows up in the thirteenth spot. The Cougars are No. 4 in scoring at 36 points per game, and the Falcons are only 0.6 points behind in sixth place.

Cougar quarterback Robbie Bosco has moved into the top spot in individual total offense—averaging 318 yards a game. Bosco was named WAC offensive player of the week for his performance last week, when he completed 29 of 44 pass attempts for 384 yards and five touchdowns.

Both teams may have to fight a common foe—the weather. The Air Force Academy had four feet of snow to clean off its football field Wednesday afternoon, and more snow is expected before Saturday's game.

"It's muddy, it hurts them the most, because of their running game," said Cougar center Trevor Matich.

"Anything can happen when it's wet," said Cougar linebacker Leon White.

The Falcons' wishbone attack presents another problem for BYU. The Cougars gave up only 64 points in their first five games, but Wyoming's wishbone burned BYU for 38 points last week.

"They're (Air Force) going to play us exactly the way Wyoming did," White said. "The wishbone is tough to defend against. We don't see it all the time."

"I think it helps us to play two wishbone teams back-to-back," said BYU coach LaVell Edwards. "We should be better prepared this week."

BYU staved off an upset bid by Wyoming last week, finally outshooting the Cowboys 41-38. That win preserved the Cougars 17-game winning streak—the nation's longest. Should BYU defeat Air Force, it would set a new school and WAC record for consecutive wins.

Air Force brings a 5-2 record into the matchup, and the Falcons are coming off a big 21-7 win over Notre Dame. Although Air Force has lost two conference games and has little chance to win the WAC, the Falcons are in the running for a Top 20 berth and their third consecutive trip to a post-season bowl.

"They seem to be on a roll," Edwards said. "It will be another very tough ball game. Air Force kids play hard all the time—whether they're way ahead or way behind."

BYU will be making its first appearance on a major network since the 1982 season. The 1:50 p.m. contest will be broadcast regionally on ABC.

"This one's on TV and we want to look good," Matich said.

The BYU defense holds fast on a goal line stand against the Wyoming Cowboys in last week's game. The Cougar defense will have to be sharp this week as it attempts to stop Air Force.

Frey is Manager of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Frey, who turned the Chicago Cubs from a lower-echelon team to a division winner in his first year with the club, was named the National League's Manager of the Year by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Frey received 16 of the possible 24 first-place BBWAA votes and seven for second for a total of 101 points to win easily over Dave Johnson of the New York Mets, whose team finished second to the Cubs in the NL East championship race.

NBA begins tonight

The National Basketball Association opens its 39th season today with a balanced class of rookies and an agreement to give players part of gate and television revenues.

Besides the advent of new faces in the league, a collective-bargaining agreement will also share the spotlight. The agreement guarantees the players 58 percent of gross gate and television revenues, while putting a limited cap on teams' salaries.

First-year players figure to make a more significant impact than last season, when Houston's Ralph Sampson dominated the rookie crop. He was the only player all season to win the NBA's monthly award for top rookies.

This year, Olajuwon, the No. 1 pick, is paired with Sampson at Houston. Sam Bowie and Sam Perkins join already strong casts at Portland and Dallas, respectively, and Michael Jordan and Melvin Turpin hope to rejuvenate poor teams at Chicago and Cleveland.

Games scheduled for tonight include: Utah at Seattle, Boston at Detroit, Atlanta at New Jersey, Cleveland at Philadelphia, Washington at Chicago and Phoenix at Golden State.

Former Cougar, Wilson to start for L.A. Raiders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former BYU quarterback Marc Wilson is the starting quarterback for the Los Angeles Raiders. He doesn't know how long he'll be in such a role, and he says, he's not thinking about it.

"I consider myself the (starting) quarterback this week," Wilson said. "I think it's premature to say that I'm the Raider quarterback. I think it would be unfair to Jim (Plunkett) and some other people to make that assumption."

"I'm happy for the opportunity to play, although it's at Jim's expense. I'm the quarterback this week. We'll see what happens next week. I'm just taking it one week at a time."

Wilson, a 6-foot-6, 206-pounder, took his first snap from center in the current National Football League season with 1:07 remaining in the first quarter on Oct. 7 in the Raiders' game against Seattle.

He had been rushed into the game because Plunkett had suffered a torn abdominal muscle. Plunkett was placed on injured reserve last Saturday, meaning he won't be able to play until Nov. 12.

Editors predict another Y win

Troy and Scott anticipate a tough battle from Air Force

By SCOTT D. PIERCE
and TROY STEINER
Sports Editors

As the seventh week of college football begins, Washington enters its game against Oregon as the fourth team to be ranked No. 1 this season. Auburn, Miami and Nebraska have all fallen by the wayside, and the pressure is now on the Huskies to maintain their position.

BYU has to deal with some pressure of its own. The Cougars place their No. 5 ranking and the nation's longest winning streak on the line against resurging Air Force.

In other WAC games, New Mexico braves the cold of Laramie to take on Wyoming. Utah braves the distractions of Honolulu to take on Hawaii, and CSU braves the warmth of San Diego to take on SDSU.

BYU at Air Force: With two losses, the Falcons appear to be pretty much out of the WAC title chase, but they're still in the hunt for a national ranking and a bowl bid. Air Force enters the game ranked 25th in the CNWSA. Today poll, while the Cougars are rated at No. 4, No. 5, No. 6 or No. 7, depending on which poll you look at. The Cougars have had two weeks to practice against the wishbone, but they've always had trouble against that offense. BYU will have to do better in the snow than it did at Laramie three years ago. Troy predicts a 10-point win for the Cougars; Scott increases the margin to two touchdowns.

New Mexico at Wyoming: New Mexico looked great in winning its first four games, and lousy in winning its last two. Wyoming is the WAC leader in inconsistency. The weather in Laramie may have a lot to do with the outcome of this game. Troy takes the Cowboys by three; Scott looks for Wyoming to win by a touchdown.

Utah at Hawaii: The Utes avoided another road loss last week, but Coach Chuck Sobat's brilliant decision to try for maximum yardage with 12 seconds remaining cost them a chance at a field goal and a win. Utah has the better team, but it always seems to find a way not to win away games. Troy hopes the Utes can finally break the jinx, predicting a 7-point Utah win. Scott goes with Hawaii by three.

Colorado State at San Diego State: The Rams surprised New Mexico last week, but the Aztec defense is surprising everyone. Neither team has any offense, so don't look for a lot of points. Both Troy and Scott forecast a 10-point SDSU triumph.

Oregon at Washington: In the past few years, no team has been able to get through the Pac-10 schedule undefeated. Washington should go at least another week, however. Troy takes the Huskies by 17; Scott boosts the margin to 21.

Michigan at Iowa: The biggest mystery in college football this year is: Who's going to win the Big Ten? Both Michigan and Iowa have looked good, mediocre and bad at times this year. Whoever loses is out of the race. Troy goes with the home-standing Hawkeyes by six; Scott takes Iowa by a field goal.

Boston College at West Virginia: B.C. came back from a two-week layoff last week and struggled with Temple. West Virginia is one of the better teams in the East, but that's not saying much this year. If Doug Flutie is on, Boston College could romp. If not, who knows? Troy looks for a Mountaineer upset by one; Scott goes with B.C. by 10.

Pitt at Miami: It's a good thing for BYU they got the Panthers to open the season — Pitt has only won one game all season. Miami has lost twice, but the Hurricanes have to be the best team in the nation with two losses. Neither Troy nor Scott expect Miami to have any trouble. Both pick Miami by 20.

Georgia Tech at Auburn: Auburn lost its first two but hasn't lost since. Georgia Tech has its best team in more than 15 years, but it may not be good enough. Troy predicts a three-point win for Auburn; Scott increases the margin to 10.

Arkansas at Texas: Texas got some help from the officials to tie Oklahoma last week, and Longhorn coach Fred Akers said his team should still be rated No. 1. However, No. 1 teams go for a win, not a tie. The Longhorns shouldn't need help from anyone to put the Razorbacks away this week.

Troy takes Texas by 10; Scott likes the Longhorns by 14.

Last week: Counting the two ties as half right and half wrong, Troy and Scott both predicted seven of 11 games correctly.

Overall: After seven weeks, Troy is 47-for-70 (.671) and Scott is 52-for-70 (.743).

Hagler will defend title; fight to be 10th defense

NEW YORK (AP)—"Let me see how much Marvin Hagler can throw," says Mustafa Hamsho. "I'm going to come out throwing everything," says Marv's Marvin Hagler.

The two will meet for the second time Friday night at Madison Square Garden.

The first time they met, Hagler did most of the throwing and Hamsho most of the catching, as Hagler pounded the native Syrian's face bloody and stopped him in the 11th round Oct. 3, 1981, at Rosemont, Ill.

Hagler was also cut in that brawl, but the champion from Brockton, Mass., was in command from the outset.

"The last time I was a different fighter completely," said the 30-year-old Hamsho, a U.S. citizen living in Brooklyn. "I never worried about bobbing and weaving."

"Now I have more experience," the No. 1-ranked contender in both the World Boxing Association and World Boxing Council. "I slip punches better."

But Hamsho's style is more brawling than boxing, and Hagler and his managers, Goody and Pat Petronelli, expect a tough fight.

"I figure him to put up a better fight than the first time," said the 30-year-old Hagler by telephone from his training camp at Provincetown, Mass. — he was to set up headquarters here today. "But I've got new combinations, better moves than the first time."

Since the first fight, Hagler has made six defenses of the undisputed title for a total of nine and a 58-2-2 record, with 49 knockouts.

Meanwhile, Hamsho has won six straight fights, including a 12-round decision over former triple champion Wilfred Benitez for a 38-2-2 record, with 22 knockouts.

Kittens heading south, bracing for Snow storm

With hopes of obtaining its first victory of the season, the BYU jayvee football team heads to Ephraim on Friday to take on the Snow College Badgers. Kickoff is 8 p.m.

BYU goes into the Snow College contest with an 0-4 season record. Snow has a conference record of 2-1.

"Snow runs a defense much like ours," said BYU coach Dennis Miller. "That will be good for us."

He said the Kittens are ready to play again. They lost to Air Force 20-14 Sept. 28 when Air Force scored a touchdown in the final moments of the game.

Play explores marriage, dating in refreshing way

'The Dance' looks honestly at relationships

THEATER REVIEW

By MARY ALICE SALMON
Lifestyle Editor

Provo audiences have been enjoying "The Dance," for several weeks now. It is a refreshingly non-typical LDS musical that can be appreciated by people of all ages and situations in life.

"The Dance" is a seemingly light-hearted journey into the LDS dating and marriage scene. Behind the songs, dancing, jokes and LDS clichés is a serious look at people and their problems.

It is an analysis that cannot help but personally touch everyone who watches it, except perhaps children, who would enjoy this musical for its entertainment value.

Anyone who has been in love, is presently in love, or hopes to be in that "blissful" state some day should see this musical before it ends its run at the Academy Square Theatre this weekend.

"The Dance" is a frank, honest look at the lives, hopes, fears and problems of three very different LDS couples at a church dance.

Howard, a man who is past his prime and still unmarried, and Alison, a newly divorced young mother, are the first couple.

The second and third couples are Brad and Janet, an 18-year-old young man and his 26-year-old date, and Karen and Neil, a supposedly perfect married couple. The musical explores their relationships.

Scott S. Anderson plays Howard, the irrepressible joker of the group, always fulfilling his role as the clown and as always, chosen as the emcee for the dance.

As he obviously quips and practical jokes his way through the first half of the play, he represents everyone who is beyond the usually accepted "marriageable age," and the way each person deals with his own situation.

"Ask me why I'm not married," he urges Alison. "Go ahead! Ask me!"

Alison sighs and complies. And Howard explosively responds, "Because my eternal mate was killed in the war in heaven!" Howard laughs louder at his own jokes than anyone else does.

Then he is sensitive and believable as he later the facade drops briefly to reveal a man with hopes and fears who needs love

as much as anyone else.

It is not surprising to hear members of the audience say, "I know someone just like him!"

Howard's date, Alison, played by Wanda Lindstrom, is a young divorcee who is feeling uncomfortable on her first night with a man since the breakup of her marriage. To her, it seems strange to be carrying on a conversation with any man more than 7 years old.

Lindstrom achieves an air of sad and graceful dignity in her portrayal, and as the show progresses and Alison and Howard have a honest talk, she expresses her anxiety and hope in a beautifully moving monologue, which is a sort of verbal decoupage of LDS myths, clichés and Primary songs.

Jason Ayon, as Brad, gives a light-hearted parody of a young man who has asked his older brother's ex-girlfriend, Janet, played by Carrie Biggs, to the dance in an attempt to make another girl jealous.

Ayon, who also choreographed the show, is funny and endearing as the bashful young man who tries desperately to get the attention of the object of his affection all evening, only to let her off when he finally achieves his goal. "I told her to take her light... and show it under a bushel!"

he tells Janet.

Biggs' performance is brilliant. She manages through little glances and expressions to include the audience in every exchange.

The most frank and serious notes in the musical are struck by Neil, played by director Michael Flynn, and Karen, played by Gaye Beeson. They are the "model" couple at the dance.

Their discussions about their relationship — marriage, love life, hopes and expectations — are sometimes startlingly

honest when taken in the context of LDS musicals, which usually tend to be too idealistic and syrupy to be true. Neil complains that Karen seems to keep busy just to avoid him. Karen quips, "Good little Mormon girls are taught to stay busy so the devil doesn't get them!" To which Neil replies, "Karen... I'm not the devil!"

The realities of married life are put in an almost harsh light as Neil and Karen half-seriously discuss "How to Stay Active in the Church by Going Inactive in Your Marriage" as a possible title for a talk they're supposed to be giving.

Karen and Neil bring home an important point when Karen says she wishes

the Savior had given a sermon on some on "keeping love alive in your marriage," and Neil replies that he actually did when he said, "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you."

Flynn and Beeson are believable as a married couple — both present a realistic mixture of irony, frustration, love and tenderness toward each other.

The musical moves quickly with song, dance and dialogue well-balanced. The audience has little opportunity to get bored, and the pace of when Alison laughs ches into the rather involved story of how her marriage failed. The audience becomes restlessly restless, but Lindstrom's moving speech and her declaration, "I was somewhere before I'm somebody after him!" remedies that.

The script and lyrics by Carol Lynn

Pearson are lively and obviously written for Mormons — it is packed with LDS

cliches and inside jokes, and is by no means meant to convert anyone. J.A.C.

Redford's music is catchy and memorable.

Director Flynn keeps the whole production flowing smoothly, and the choreography, while not spectacular by any means, is refreshing, especially when Brad (Ayon) performs a tap dance in tennis shoes to his own sound effects.

The musical is to be recommended to anyone interested in seeing a highly entertaining yet highly realistic look at life.

'Cosby,' 'Murder' best new TV series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For once the critics and the public see eye-to-eye on the best new shows of the season.

NBC's "The Cosby Show" and CBS' "Murder She Wrote" were near unanimous choices among the critics as the best new comedy show and the best new drama series.

The two shows are also the only certified hits among the 22 shows that made their premiere in the fall season. They are the only ones that managed to stay in the Top 10.

"The Cosby Show" marks Bill Cosby's return to series TV after an eight-year absence. Cosby stars as Cliff Huxtable, an obstetrician who lives in a New York City brownstone with his lawyer-wife and four children.

One rewarding thing about the show is that it doesn't sacrifice credibility for one-liners. It manages to be both funny and intelligent. Cosby's children don't spout adult wisdom, and when they say or do something foolish, the parents don't let them get away with it.

"Murder She Wrote" is a leisurely paced mystery.

Spock's wife says he didn't 'know beans'

NEW YORK (UPI)

The wife of Dr. Benjamin Spock says the famous pediatrician, who guided millions of parents in rearing their children, "didn't know beans" about parenting and was a difficult man to live with.

When Spock, 81, married Mary Morgan eight years ago and became a stepfather to her 11-year-old daughter, he proved he still had a lot to learn about step-parenting. Parade magazine reported.

For three years, her daughter would not even speak to Spock, Morgan said.

"Ben had written numerous articles on step-parenting, which he thought were full of wisdom. But after acquiring Ginger, he realized he didn't know beans about being a stepfather," she said.

She said the situation has improved and this year Spock gave the commencement address at her daughter's high school graduation.

Spock is best known for his book, "Baby and Child Care," which has sold over 25 million copies since it was first published in 1946.

Publication experience offered

Yearbook staff looks for volunteers to do writing, layout

An opportunity for students to gain experience working on a professional publication is being offered by BYU's student yearbook, The Banyan.

According to Patrick Mundt, the Banyan's managing editor, he is in the process of finding volunteer staff members to work in the copy and layout departments.

"Students who are on the staff have the opportunity to work on a professional publication," Mundt said. "This allows staff members to gain valuable hands-on experience as a writer or layout person."

This year's Banyan, Mundt said, will be different from last year's book. "This year's book will be full-color, as was last year's, but will emphasize more student activities. To make this year's yearbook more representative of students, an extensive market analysis and survey has been disseminated to students by the Communications Department," he said.

The goal of the survey is to find out what students want the yearbook to be like.

This year's Banyan editorial staff, Mundt said, is composed of new members, who will help implement the new format and ideas.

Students who are interested in joining the yearbook staff should contact the Banyan office at 239 BLWC to set up an interview with Mundt or another member of the editorial staff.

Winter driving can be hazardous, but there are many things drivers can do to minimize the danger involved, said Lt. Michael Harroun of the University Police.

"People need to realize winter is approaching rapidly and they need to begin to drive a little more cautiously," Harroun said.

Reduced visibility and inadequate traction are two common problems in the winter. "Drivers should get the feel of the road and driving conditions when starting out or when conditions change," he said.

Drivers need to accelerate carefully to see if their wheels spin, or brake gently to see if they slide, he said. "Squeeze the brakes with slow and steady pressure until just before they lock. Then ease off until the wheels are rolling easily again."

Good tires are another essential in winter driving. "Have good tires with good tread, or use snow tires or studded tires," he said.

Chains are also a must in this area, Harroun said. "We live in ski country here and if people want to ski, they must realize that sometimes snow tires are not just enough to get up those canyons."

Harroun said going slower is necessary to reduce danger in driving. "Reduce speed and extend following distance according to the conditions. It takes three to nine times as far to stop on snow and ice as on dry pavement," he said.

Drivers should also keep windshields and windows clear at all times. "Replace streaking wiper blades and be sure windshield washer solution contains adequate anti-freeze," Harroun said.

Anti-freeze should also be put in the radiator, he said. "People need to be reminded of that every winter. If not, they forget, and then it's too late."

Harroun said seatbelts should be worn at all times. "Thoughtfulness is another thing Harroun said will help to cut down on the number of accidents this winter."

Guilty pleas entered in truck theft ring

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—A Salt Lake City man alleged to have been the ringleader of what authorities believe was the largest truck theft ring ever to have operated in Utah has pleaded guilty to four federal charges.

James Frank Loveless, 46, pleaded guilty Wednesday to three counts of receiving stolen property and one count of interstate transportation of stolen property.

Also pleading guilty to one count of receiving stolen property was Leroy Anton Hulinsky, 40, of Salt Lake City.

The two men were among eight defendants indicted by a federal grand jury Nov. 30, 1983, following a two-year investigation by local, state and federal authorities from nearly two dozen agencies in Utah, Arizona and Nevada.

The 29-count indictment said the truck theft ring had operated for several years by stealing large diesel truck tractors, transporting them to Utah, dismantling them in a "chop shop" operation and selling the parts.

U.S. Attorney for Utah Brent D. Ward said in a news release Wednesday that Loveless "was the principal target of the grand jury and the person believed to have been in charge of the operation."

Each count to which Loveless pleaded guilty carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Chief U.S. District Judge Aldon J. Anderson set sentencing for Loveless and Hulinsky for Nov. 26.

The indictment referred to the theft of 15 late-model diesel tractors worth about $1.2 million, which were dismantled with sophisticated equipment at three "chop shop" garages in Utah between January 1981 and November 1983.

The parts were then sold in Utah, South Dakota, Arizona and Wisconsin.

Other defendants charged in the indictment included:

—Stanley Dean Brown, 30, Salt Lake City, who pleaded guilty to two counts and was sentenced in January to five years in prison.

—Lawrence Clark Reber, 49, St. George, who pleaded guilty to one count and was sentenced in February to three years imprisonment with the stipulation he be confined to a jail-type institution for six months.

—David Ross Jorgensen, 45, Provo, who pleaded guilty to one count and was sentenced to three years imprisonment under the same conditions that applied to Reber.

—Wayne Searle, 40, a Salt Lake City attorney, pleaded innocent and was acquitted in May following a trial on charges of obstruction of justice.

—Garry Peppmüller, 44, residence unknown, was convicted following a trial and was sentenced Sept. 5 to one year in prison on each of two counts.
